In accordance with the Food Information Regulations you must provide information for customers when purchasing food regarding all of the 14 food allergens that may be present in the food you produce/sell. Information on the allergens may be provided by writing on labels, menus for example or verbally by a member of staff. A notice should be displayed informing customers of this.

Prepacked for direct sale foods

Prepacked for direct sale is food that is packaged at the same place it is offered or sold to consumers and is in this packaging before it is ordered or selected. If you sell products you have pre-packed yourself on site, then this means that 'pre-packed for direct sale' provisions apply. These foods will need to have a label, the label needs to show the name of the food and the full ingredients list with allergenic ingredients emphasised within it.

Prepacked foods

If you sell pre-packaged food that was packed by another business, these foods must have full labelling, including the name of the food, full ingredients list, with allergenic ingredients emphasised and other mandatory details.
